What is covered in Feedback Conversations?

- Use effective methods of feedback to lift performance and assist people in appreciating where they can improve and expand their skills or impact in the workplace.
- Apply the principles of brain science to ensure feedback is received when the brain is more receptive
- Practice using the SBIC feedback model to ensure a change in behaviour is encouraged

Who is it for?

This module increases your awareness of the power of ongoing feedback and in-the-moment feedback. Building a culture of two-way feedback helps establish a learning culture in the team and builds a workspace governed by psychological safety.

What does it offer?

Understanding how to set the scene for feedback and demonstrating masterful ways of connecting with others while providing feedback is key to building a psychologically safe space for your team. Recognising the different ways to give feedback and appreciating the different styles of your team will help leaders frame feedback in a way that the feedback is heard and acted upon.
